Moab Art Trails launched its program in 2015 with a permanent gift of art to Grand County. Michael Ford Dunton's "Forces at Play" stand as an elegant invitation to Place at one of the oldest shared pathways in the Far West, the Moab Crossing at the Colorado Riverway Bike and Pedestrian Bridge.

Moab City and Grand County have committed to purchasing a piece valued up to $10,000 for the public's permanent collection from this year long exhibition, featuring 16 works from 10 local, regional and national artists. At the end of the 2018 year, the current exhibit will make way for next years' selections.

In order to select public art that truly reflects and anchors the unique character of our community, Moab Art Trails brings an opportunity to share your stories, perhaps even your ancestors' stories about life in the Moab area. Your responses will help preserve true colors of place as the public art collection grows. Recollections will be archived in a "Profiles of Place" History project in partnership with the Museum of Moab. tell your story at moobartrails.org/pop

This first ever event of its kind in Moab is produced with the generous support of the Moab Arts Council, the Moab Arts & Recreation Center, Grand County, the City of Moab, and the grace of a whole host of totally wonderful artists, contributors, arts lovers, civil servants, builders, visionaries and friends.
